Company plans expansion

By SHERRY KONCZEK

The city of Carthage announced plans to expand their business district with the addition of new businesses and the construction of a new building.

According to the city, the expansion will include the construction of a new building on the corner of Main and Broadway. This new building will include office space, retail space, and a community center.

In addition to the new building, the city plans to upgrade the existing buildings in the business district, including the Old City Hall and the Carthage Bank.

Funding for the expansion plans is expected to come from a combination of city funds and private investors.

Diabetic Awareness begins program year

Diabetic Awareness of Carthage kicks off the fall season with a variety of programs and events.

The program will begin on September 15, with a health fair at the Carthage City Hall. The fair will feature a variety of vendors, including diabetes education specialists, nutritionists, and exercise trainers.

On October 12, the city will host a diabetic awareness Walkathon, with proceeds going to support local diabetes research and education programs.

Finally, the program concludes on November 20, with a diabetes awareness concert at the Carthage Auditorium. The concert will feature a variety of artists, including local bands and musicians.

Diabetic Awareness is committed to raising awareness and providing resources to help those affected by diabetes.

Medical building bids on agenda for joint meeting

A Medical building project is set to be discussed at the next joint meeting of the Board of Commissioners and the City Council.

The project, which is scheduled for September 15, 2023, will include the construction of a new medical building on the corner of Main and Broadway. The building will include office space for medical professionals and a community health center.

The project is expected to cost $12 million, and funding will come from a combination of city funds and private investors.

The meeting will be held at the Carthage City Hall at 7:00 PM. The public is invited to attend and provide input on the project.
Williams' East Texas bulls take to the road

BY EUGENE KNOX

Black boxes by Panola County Sheriff's Department

If you own a couple of heavily built Texas bulls, it won't take much to get them on the road. If you've got a couple of loudly bellowing, horn-heavy bulls, you might not even need to worry about getting them out onto the road. But if you've got some of the smaller, more docile Texas bulls, it might take a bit more work to get them safely on the road.

The best way to get your Texas bulls on the road is to use a truck. Make sure you have enough room for all the bulls you need to transport. You can also use a trailer to transport your bulls, but you'll need to make sure you have the proper permits and insurance for any trailer used to transport livestock.

Once you have your bulls loaded onto the truck or trailer, you need to make sure they're comfortable and secure. Provide plenty of food and water, and make sure the bulls have enough room to move around. You should also use a safe method of tying the bulls to the truck or trailer to prevent them from falling off or getting away.

Safety is the most important thing when transporting your Texas bulls. Make sure you follow all the rules and regulations for transporting livestock in your state. With careful planning and attention to detail, you can safely transport your Texas bulls to their new destination.

LAWS

Laws are the rules that govern a society. They are created and enforced by the government to maintain order and control behavior. Laws can be categorized into different types, such as criminal law, civil law, and administrative law. Criminal law deals with offenses against society, such as murder, arson, and theft. Civil law deals with disputes between individuals, such as contracts, family law, and intellectual property. Administrative law deals with regulations and rules that govern the behavior of organizations, such as businesses and government agencies.

THE FUTURE

The future is uncertain and shaped by many factors. It is influenced by the actions of individuals, governments, and organizations, as well as by natural events and technological advancements. The future can be positive or negative, depending on how these factors interact. It is important to consider the potential consequences of our actions and decisions in order to make informed choices that can shape a better future for ourselves and for future generations.
