Autumn storm causes flooding, clouding outlook

High winds and pounding rains continued all week to flood many Paso County residents without hydroelectric dams and rising floodwaters. A recent flood map by the U.S. Geological Survey reveals that the entire county is vulnerable to flooding, with nearly all areas experiencing some degree of risk.

One woman in central Paso County has made a dramatic change in her home. Mary Johnson, who lives near the edge of the river, reported that her home was flooded for the first time in her 20 years there.

"When the river rose," she said, "we had to evacuate. It was a scary experience, but we're lucky we were able to get out in time."}

Beckville searching for new band director

"An interim superintendent has been named for Beckville ISD," said Paso County Superintendent John Davis. "The district's board of trustees has appointed an interim superintendent and conductor of staff, Michael一千ons, to serve in the interim position. The board is currently in search of a permanent replacement." According to Davis, the interim superintendent will work closely with the board to identify and hire a permanent superintendent.

Davis also announced that the Paso County Junior High School has conducted a successful search for new band director. The search process included interviews with several candidates, and the selection committee has recommended the appointment of a new band director.

"I am confident that the new band director will bring new energy and enthusiasm to our music program," said Davis. "We are excited to welcome [name] as our new band director and look forward to seeing the growth of our music program under his leadership."
Studivants found contracts during Middle East stay

By LAURA NICHOLI

Tim M., 21, a junior at Texas A&M University here, said he had just decided to join in the Middle East's revolution against the regime. And he brought back with him a collection of photographs showing the people and places that had caught his eye. Tim M. is a student at Texas A&M University, where he is majoring in political science.

"I don't want to be a refugee," he told his parents before leaving for the region. "I want to be a citizen of the world." Tim M. brought back with him a collection of photographs showing the people and places that had caught his eye. Tim M. is a student at Texas A&M University, where he is majoring in political science.

Ruling states mental health history question legal

State Capitol HIGHLIGHTS by Lyndell Williams & Ed Starling

In the wake of attacks made by sexual offenders who have been deemed to be "sexually violent predators," the Texas Senate passed a bill that would make it mandatory for those offenders to undergo a mental health evaluation. The bill, sponsored by Sen. John瑜 (D-Austin), is similar to legislation already in place in California and Washington State. The Senate passed the bill by a vote of 27-5, with all five Democrats and Republican Senator for Panola County, Danie Easley, voting against. The bill now goes to the House for consideration.

The bill would require a court to order a mental health evaluation for any sexually violent predator who has been convicted of a sexual offense for which the sentence is greater than 15 years.

The evaluation would be conducted by a court-appointed psychologist or psychiatrist and would include a determination of whether the offender has a mental illness or developmental disability that contributes to the likelihood of sexual violence.

The cost of the evaluation would be borne by the state, and the results would be used by the court to determine whether the offender is a sexually violent predator.

The bill was supported by advocates of mental health care who argued that it would help protect the public from sexually violent offenders.

Spillway 'headache' continues for board

In recent months, Spillway has been a hot topic on the Panola County Board of Commissioners. The board has been struggling to find a solution to the problem of water flowing over the spillway, which has caused flooding in the area. The board has considered several options, including building a new dam, but so far, no consensus has been reached.

At its meeting last week, the board heard a presentation from the Texas Water Development Board, which recommended a $100 million project to construct a new spillway. The board has since directed staff to investigate the feasibility of the proposal.

Curtis Soileau, a member of the board, expressed concern about the cost of the project and the potential impact on the surrounding area.

"I think we need to take a hard look at this," Soileau said. "This is a big decision, and we need to make sure we're making the right one for the people of Panola County."

Child abuse allegations scheduled for grand jury

A packer of information given to The Panola Watchman this week alleged sexual abuse took place in a Panola County home, which included allegations of sexual abuse of a child under the age of 11. The report stated that the abuse would continue to go on in the same house, which was also alleged to be involved in other sex abuse cases. The report also stated that additional information about the abuse would be forthcoming. The report stated that the abuse took place on the same day as the alleged sex abuse of a child reported last week.

RAIN

Bob Carper has an excellent record of sustained rainfall during this season, according to the National Weather Service. The results of the last month show that Carper has received a total of approximately 1.5 inches of rainfall, which is well below the 2.5 inches that was expected.

Frosh feel they can turn season around

The Dogs have had to rely too much on their defense as of late, and this will become even more apparent for the remainder of the season. The defense has been able to keep the offense in the game, but the offense has struggled to carry the team. The Dogs need to start playing more as a team and not rely solely on defense. The offense needs to step up and start scoring more points. The Dogs have the talent to turn this season around and make it a successful one.

Rams hold key to Beckville's success

Beckville's offense has been rely dependent on the running game, but the Rams have been able to shut down the running game and force Beckville to rely on their passing game. This has allowed the Rams to gain the upper hand in the game. The Rams need to continue to play with confidence and not give up on the running game. If the Rams can keep up the pressure on Beckville's offense, they will be able to come out on top.

Bearcats seeking winning record

The Bearcats are looking to improve their record and get back on the winning track. They have had some tough losses recently and are looking to bounce back. The Bearcats need to focus on improving their defense and limiting the amount of points they give up. If they can do this, they will be able to turn their season around and start winning games.
Breast cancer screening available

Early detection vital

Early detection is key to the survival of breast cancer. The American Cancer Society advises that women between the ages of 25 and 40 should have a mammogram every 1-2 years. After the age of 40, the American Cancer Society recommends that women have a mammogram every year. It is crucial to have regular screenings to detect breast cancer early, as early detection increases the chances of survival.

Book club history vital in Cartagena growth
