Republicans gain much in statewide races

The political landscape in 2022 was marked by Republican gains in many statewide races. In this edition of The Monitor, we explore the key races that shaped the political climate and the implications for future elections.

Local man earns state Senate seat

John Smith was elected to the State Senate in a tight race against his Democratic opponent, Jane Doe. Smith, a resident of Smalltown, ran on a platform of fiscal responsibility and limited government. His victory was seen as a sign of growing anti-tax sentiment across the state.

Lake board rescinds mandatory inspections for lease transfers

The Board of Trustees of the Wash Water Supply District announced on November 15 that they are rescinding the mandatory inspection requirement for lease transfers.

The board cited that the inspections were not necessary due to the advancements in water supply technology. They also noted that the inspections were a burden on the lessees and that the mandate was not supported by the majority of the board members.

Trash haulers concerned over new rules

Local haulers expressed concern over the new regulations imposed by the city. They feared that the new rules would lead to an increase in the cost of waste disposal, which would negatively impact their businesses.

City tightens policies at incinerator

The city of Smalltown has tightened its policies at the incinerator to reduce the amount of waste sent to the facility. These changes were made in response to community concerns about the environmental impact of the incinerator.

Animal carcasses health threat

The practice of burning animal carcasses at the incinerator has raised concerns about the spread of diseases. The city has implemented new policies to address this issue.

Mount Zion receives historical marker

Know Your Heritage

by Linda K. LaGrenne

This has been an exciting month for the Mount Zion Cemetery Association. Members have been working hard to preserve and restore the cemetery, including the historical marker. The marker was dedicated on November 13, 2014, at a ceremony attended by family and friends. The event was part of a statewide effort to recognize and celebrate the history and legacy of Black churches and their role in the community. The marker is a tribute to the history of Mount Zion and serves as a reminder of the church’s contributions to the community.

60th wedding anniversary

On Nov. 14, to celebrate their 60th wedding anniversary, the couple held a special ceremony. The event was attended by family and friends, and the couple received many well-wishes.
