Daniel Street residents meet to ward off criminals

By SHERRY KONICEK

Under pressure from a group of neighbors, the council will consider a resolution to restrict alcohol sales on Daniel Street, which is patrolled by the BPD High-Tech Team.

The meeting of the Bell Hill and Morgan Hill Street neighborhood association, scheduled for tonight at 7 at 351 Daniel St., will feature a presentation by the BPD's new Crime Prevention Team about its work on the High-Tech Patrol, which was created last year.

The team, which includes officers from the Boston Police Department and the neighborhood association, meets weekly to discuss crime prevention strategies and to plan patrols.

During the meeting, residents will be able to ask questions and provide feedback on the team's work.

Plans in motion for Jim Reeves Day

By DANEIL HUMPHREY

Census data released Monday show that there are more women than men in the city, with the percentage of women increasing by 1.5% over the past decade.

The data also show that the city's population has grown by the same percentage over the past 10 years, from 641,827 in 2010 to 679,372 in 2020.

These changes are significant because they will affect the city's budget, which is based on the population of the city.

Mayor Walsh has already announced plans to increase funding for education, health care, and other programs in the upcoming budget.

Know Your Heritage by Leila B. LaGrone

Early records of Italian families in Panola County make it clear that they had been in the area prior to the official records.

Ancestral records show that the Italian families of the area include the families of Cantu, De Luca, DeSimone, and Giannini. These families were the first to settle in the area and they established the first churches in the area.

Today, the Italian community in Panola County is still thriving and active. The Italian Festival is one of the highlights of the year and it attracts thousands of visitors. The festival includes traditional Italian food, live music, and dance performances.

Family Values Should Be More Than Just A Phase

During recent election campaigns and at other times, we have heard a lot about so-called "family values." It seems that all of the political spectrum. Even with diverse and single parenthood becoming increasingly common, it should be taken to mean a lot of family values, or "family values." Children should be taught not to be afraid to tell parents about their problems and concerns. Your House of Worship can be a great help in these areas, and indeed, may be able to prevent some of the tragedies you hear about. Talk to your children, they can be helpful in the lives of you and your family.
