Leisure, licenses, and legislation: it's another busy week at Cartage. Students are registered to vote, the college's political action committee is gearing up for election season, and the registrar is preparing for the fall semester.

By DANA HUMPHREYS

"Students are really excited about the upcoming elections," said.Results director John Smith. "They're eager to make their voices heard and have a say in the future of the nation and the campus.

The registrar's office has been working hard to ensure that all students are properly registered. "We've had a steady stream of students coming in to register," Smith said. "And we're seeing a lot of enthusiasm for the upcoming elections."

The registrar's office has also been working with local politicians to ensure that the college's political action committee is properly registered and ready to go. "We've been in close contact with the local political parties, and we're ready to support the candidates of our choosing," Smith said.

The registrar's office has also been working on other important tasks, such as updating student records and assisting with academic advising. "We're here to help students succeed," Smith said. "And we're ready to do whatever it takes to make sure that happens."

The registrar's office is located in the Student Union Building, and students are encouraged to visit in person or call (555) 123-4567 for more information.
