DPS makes $1 million cocaine bust

By SHERRY KOON

A federal task force has closed an operation that could net $1 million in cocaine, according to Thomas Camp, director of the federal Drug Enforcement Administration in Dallas.

Camp said the operation began in September and included the arrest of six people who were allegedly involved in the distribution of cocaine.

He said the operation involved the cooperation of the Drug Enforcement Administration, the Dallas Police Department, the U.S. Attorney's Office, and the U.S. Marshals Service.

Pharmaceuticals

The operation was the result of an investigation into the illegal distribution of cocaine, which involves the use of false prescriptions and the use of corrupted doctors.

The operation was conducted in the Dallas area, including Fort Worth and Austin.

The operation was successful in discovering the presence of cocaine in a number of areas, including a pharmacy in Dallas.

DPS said the investigation is continuing, and that more arrests are expected.

methodist shrines give inspiration

Know Your Heritage by Leila B. LaGrone

A century of work has made it possible for thousands of Methodists to come together in shrines. A shrine was a place of worship, usually a church, where the faithful could gather for prayer and communion. Today, shrines are still a central part of Methodist life, offering a place of spiritual renewal and growth. Leila B. LaGrone is a member of the shrine committee at the Methodist Church, and she shares her knowledge of these shrines in this article. She discusses the history and significance of Methodism shrines, and how they continue to play an important role in the lives of believers. LaGrone's article is a valuable resource for anyone interested in the history and practices of Methodism, and it is sure to inspire readers to explore the shrines and their importance in their own faith.

Briggs rushes for 146 as he returns from varsity stint

Frosh rout Cats with four first-half TD's

Kevon Briggs continued his return to the familiar pace with a 146-yard rushing performance and the only mistake he makes is that he doesn't carry the ball more for the second year in a row. But his presence was felt Thursday night as the Bears defeated Carthage 48-6.

Carthage senior backs in the legs of the Bears to the tune of 146 yards in 14 Carths' attempts. Briggs scored four times in the first half, including a one-yard touchdown in the second quarter. He also scored in the second and third quarters.

Erik Wehr, Dennis Williams and Chad Landers were the other Bears' backs to score touchdowns for Carthage. Wehr scored from 22 yards out in the first quarter, Williams from 20 yards in the second, and Landers from 23 yards in the third.

Carthage senior back Greg Johns (14) scores a one-yard touchdown to give Carthage a 14-0 lead over Carthage.
