Women's clinic to open

A joint statement released by the hospitals and the Panola Family Planning Center last week said that a women's health clinic would open in Carthage in the fall of 1996.

The statement said that the clinic, which will be a joint venture between the hospitals and the Panola Family Planning Center, will provide a wide range of services for women, including reproductive health services, family planning services, and general health care.

The statement did not specify the location of the clinic or the number of services that will be offered.

MLK drug arrest marks increased patrols

A defining moment was announced by the Panola County Sheriff's Office last week, as they announced that they would be increasing patrols in the city of Carthage in response to a drug arrest made in January.

The arrest, which occurred in January, involved the arrest of a local resident on charges of drug distribution.

The sheriff's office said that they would be increasing patrols in the areas where the arrest occurred and would be working closely with local law enforcement agencies to ensure public safety.

The statement did not specify the number of additional patrols or the duration of the increased patrols.

Brown gives history of big bands

During his recent appearance at the Panola County Historical Society meeting, retired musician and historian Mr. Brown gave a comprehensive overview of the world of big bands, including the rise of swing music and the popularity of bands like Glenn Miller and Tommy Dorsey.

Mr. Brown began his presentation by discussing the early days of swing music and the impact that bands like Benny Goodman and Count Basie had on the genre.

He went on to discuss the golden age of swing music in the 1940s and 1950s, highlighting the influence of bands like Duke Ellington and Cab Calloway.

Mr. Brown concluded his presentation by discussing the evolution of big bands in the 1960s and 1970s, highlighting the rise of jazz fusion and the impact that bands like Herbie Hancock and Weather Report had on the genre.

O'Neal explores 'Ghost Towns'

By Laura Napier

Who knew there was a side of Fort Worth not normally seen? Do you know about the haunted places described in 'Ghost Towns'? Well, you do now! Apparently, many people will be able to check out these haunted sites in person.

There are several haunted sites in Fort Worth, including the Old Stone House, the Fort Worth Stockyards, and the Fort Worth Museum of Science and History. Some people believe that these places are haunted because of the many tragic events that have occurred there.

First Things First

Tula Biggs

The first thing I did was to go to the local library and find the location of the nearest haunted house. I then called a local paranormal group to see if they would be interested in going to the location.

NAFTA increases traffic flow

Traffic along U.S. 87 and other highways leading to and from the border, which is expected to increase due to the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA), is slowing down at the border crossings.

The challenges facing transportation officials in the border area include congestion at the international bridges and the potential for increased commerce.

The agreement, which took effect on Jan. 1, 1994, has been likened to free trade agreements that have been in place for decades. The goal is to eliminate most barriers to trade and investment between the United States, Canada, and Mexico.

The transportation officials are working to ensure that the infrastructure can handle the increased traffic, which may require investments in new facilities and infrastructure improvements.

Sixth graders play market for math

Frac's the mind boggles as a certain amount of math is performed by Collins and his sixth grade classmates as they perform a routine that will have the math teacher smiling with pride. The students are selling food at a market they have set up in their classroom. "We're selling two different types of food at our market," says Collins. The students have learned about fractions and percentages as they prepare the food for sale. The math teacher is impressed with the students' efforts and the way they have applied mathematical concepts in a real-world situation.

Hospital mammography offer extended

Response prompts hospital to take November appointments

High interest in mammography services at the local hospital has prompted the hospital to extend its mammography appointment dates for November. The hospital's mammography department has seen a significant increase in demand for the service, with many women choosing to undergo mammograms as part of their routine health checkups. In response, the hospital has extended its appointment dates to accommodate the growing demand.
