Public hearing set for proposed fire district

By Laura Negro

A public hearing has been set for the possible creation of a new fire district in the County Road Fire Protection District. County Commissioners will announce the date of the hearing in a matter of days. The hearing is expected to be held in the district's auditorium, but the exact date and time have not been announced.

The proposed fire district would cover an area of 12,000 acres and serve approximately 10,000 residents. The district would be funded through property taxes and would replace the current fire protection services provided by the County Road Fire Protection District.

The hearing is an important step in the process of creating a new fire district. It will provide an opportunity for residents to voice their opinions and concerns about the proposed fire district. The hearing will be followed by a vote of the County Commissioners, which will determine whether to create the new fire district.
