Crude oil production in county nears record level

Oil production in Panola County on the climb in December and January as evidenced by the Texas Railroad Commission, the agency that quotas permitted from field wells is reaching record levels. In March, close to a hundred operators were working on the production of oil in Panola County, marking a high that hasn't been seen in the last few years. The figure compares with 52,025 barrels produced in February.

Last March, the crude producers showered in Panola County had a production rate of 2,500 barrels, but in January, the figure was 4,242,250.

Historically, the county saw a strong production in the month of March, but the recent freeze may have affected the output. The monthly average oil production for the month of March is estimated to be around 1,500 barrels, with a 20% increase expected for the next few months. Panola County is known for its oil production, and the current production levels are expected to continue for the next few months.

The county has a long-standing history in the oil industry, and the recent production figures are a testament to the county's potential. The county authorities are optimistic about the future of the oil industry in Panola County, and they expect the production to continue at a steady pace.

Panola County crude production figure for March is estimated to be around 3,200 barrels, which is a significant increase from last year.

Panola County crude production figure for February is estimated to be around 2,500 barrels, which is a significant increase from last year.

Jerry Bunneman

The last week of March I was struck with a deep sense of despair. We were dealing with the death of my father, the uncertainty of our future, and the impact of the recent economic downturn on our finances. The news of the pandemic also added to the sense of uncertainty.

At times like these, it's easy to feel overwhelmed by the weight of our worries. But I've learned over the years that it's important to focus on what we can control instead of dwelling on what we can't.

I've found that the following steps can help me cope during these challenging times:

1. Pray — I start each day with a prayer, asking God for guidance and strength. This helps me stay connected to a higher power and feel less alone.
2. Exercise — Regular physical activity helps me reduce stress and improve my mood. I try to take a walk or go for a run every day.
3. Meditation — I practice meditation to calm my mind and focus on present moment awareness. This helps me stay centered and less reactive to external stimuli.
4. Connect with others — I make an effort to stay in touch with friends and family. Sharing my thoughts and feelings with others helps me feel less isolated.

By following these steps, I've been able to find a sense of strength and resilience during some of the toughest moments in my life. I hope these tips can be helpful to others who are going through similar challenges.

A new day brings new opportunities. It's a time to reflect on the past and look forward to the future. To make the most of this opportunity, I suggest the following steps:

1. Set Goals — Write down what you want to achieve in the coming weeks. This will help you stay focused and motivated.
2. Prioritize — Make a list of your tasks and prioritize them according to their importance and urgency.
3. Take Action — Don't wait until the last minute. Start working on your tasks as soon as possible.
4. Stay Organized — Keep your schedule and files organized to avoid wasting time on searching for things.
5. Stay Positive — Keep a positive attitude. Focus on the good things in your life and try to solve any problems that arise.

By following these steps, you can make the most of your time and achieve your goals. Remember, a new day brings new opportunities. Let's make the most of it.
