Report in murder case leads to another arrest

By Sherry Reardon
The Panola Watchman

Investigations into the death of Donald R. Barlow have taken yet another strange twist and Barlow's Caddo County jail cell is just the starting point for a confusing array of circumstances surrounding what Caddo County Sheriff Mike McGraw calls "the most bizarre crime" ever to hit the county. Barlow, 56, was found shot to death on a private road between the Sanbox River and County Road 236 at around 4:30 a.m. on Saturday, July 25, 1998. A tipster informed Sheriff McGraw about the body, which had been moved to the center of the road, and authorities have been investigating ever since.

A neighbor of Barlow's, John David Powers, 53, was identified as a suspect in the murder case and is in custody at the Caddo County Jail. Powers was arrested and charged with the murder of Donald Barlow.

"We're taking this investigation seriously," said Caddo County Sheriff Mike McGraw. "But right now, we don't have any evidence to link Powers to the murder. We're just gathering information and following leads." McGraw said that the investigation is ongoing and that no further details will be released until the case is solved.

"We're trying to get as many details as possible," said Caddo County Sheriff Mike McGraw. "But right now, we don't have any evidence to link Powers to the murder. We're just gathering information and following leads." McGraw said that the investigation is ongoing and that no further details will be released until the case is solved.
