CISD student conduct rules set at Tuesday board meeting

The Conroe Independent School District (CISD) school board met for its regular meeting on Tuesday, setting student conduct rules including a new rule that students will not be able to have any non-school-related items in their backpacks, such as electronic devices, food, or drinks. The board also approved the budget for the upcoming school year.

A teacher at Lake Creek High School, Chris Bowers, said the new rule is intended to reduce chaos in the hallways and ensure student safety. Bowers noted that he has seen instances where students have dropped items from their backpacks, causing injuries to themselves and others.

The new rule will go into effect on the first day of school, which is August 26th. Students will be required to keep all non-school-related items in their backpacks, including electronic devices, food, and drinks. Teachers will be responsible for checking students' backpacks at the beginning of each school day.

The board also approved the budget for the upcoming school year, which includes funding for new technology, including laptops and tablets for all students. The budget also includes funding for additional staff, including counselors and guidance counselors.

The board also discussed the possibility of implementing a new program that would allow students to retake exams they did not pass on the first attempt. The program would be voluntary and would be available to students who have a cumulative GPA of 2.0 or higher.
