God, Bible are strong building materials for Neals’ marriage

When young Mrs. Allen (Mrs. Neal) was a girl, her mother told her about something special, "my brightest shining armor" she called it. This experience and the guidance of the Bible shaped her character and later influenced her husband-to-be, John Neal. It was a two-week stay in the library where she read and studied the Bible. She read from Genesis to Revelation and memorized verses. John Neal, a student himself, was impressed by her dedication and decided to join her. This unique experience, along with the Bible, became the cornerstone of their relationship and future life together.

The Neal family continued for three years, during this time, Mrs. Neal studied at Rhodes State College in Circleville, Ohio, where she met John. Their relationship blossomed, and by 1933, they were engaged. Before long, they bought their first home—a small bungalow in Circleville, Ohio. John, on the other hand, had already started his journalism career.

The Neal’s moved to New Orleans in 1935, where Mrs. Neal continued her studies at Tulane University. After a few years, they settled in Circleville, Ohio, and Mrs. Neal began teaching at a local high school. Their children, John and Susan, were born during this time.

The Neal family moved to Ohio in 1945, and Mrs. Neal continued her studies at Ohio State University. By 1948, they had moved to Circleville, where they opened their own business, the Neal’s Bakery. The business flourished, and the Neal family remained a prominent part of the community.

Little girl’s dream comes true

Sheila Johnson, a little girl, dreamed of having her wedding in a castle. Her dream came true when her dad, John Neal, took her to the castle in Circleville, Ohio. The castle was transformed into a fairy tale setting, complete with decorations and music. The bride was dressed in a beautiful gown, and the groom was in his tuxedo. The guests were amazed by the beauty of the castle and the joy on the faces of the bride and groom. It was a magical day for everyone involved, and it will always be remembered as a fairy tale wedding.

Elegant expressions for at home receptions

In the spirit of elegance, the reception was held in their backyard, surrounded by the beauty of nature. The table settings were arranged with care, and the flowers were hand-picked from their garden. The food was prepared by their own family, with a special menu designed for the occasion. The music was provided by a local band, and the atmosphere was filled with joy and love. It was a day to remember, and the memories will last a lifetime.
