Evidence insufficient for grand jury probe

Mosley’s resignation prompts DA inquiry

By Sherry Kassam

The Panola Watchman

Carthage school board members accepted the resignation of Superintendent C. B. Mosley on Monday, Aug. 6. The resignation of the 49-year-old superintendent was the result of a four-month investigation by the Panola County Sheriff’s Office.

Effective Feb. 2, Mosley’s three-year contract from the school district ended. During his tenure, Mosley was the subject of much speculation among teachers and parents. The investigation began after a citizen complained to the sheriff's office.

Shortly after Mosley tendered his resignation, the sheriff’s department announced that the Panola Watchman had learned that the sheriff’s department had been trying to investigate Mosley’s alleged misconduct.

According to the sheriff, the sheriff’s department was investigating the superintendent’s conduct after a citizen complained.

The sheriff’s office confirmed that the investigation had been underway for several months.

The sheriff’s department said that it had been investigating Mosley’s alleged conduct, which included allegations of misdeeds in his personal and professional life.

The sheriff’s department said that it had been investigating Mosley’s alleged conduct for several months, but that it had not found sufficient evidence to bring charges.

Law to demand criminal background investigation

A new law requiring criminal background checks for people providing in-home care has passed with widespread support. The law, which was introduced in response to the increasing number of unscrupulous individuals taking advantage of the growing number of elderly and disabled people, takes effect on October 1.

The law requires that all in-home care workers undergo a thorough criminal background check before being hired. The check will include an interval search of state and federal criminal databases.

The law was supported by a broad coalition of organizations, including the American Association of Retired Persons, the National Alliance on Mental Illness, and the National Council on Aging.

City offers new computer service

The City of Carthage has partnered with the Junior High School to offer a computer software program to new residents. This program is designed to help new residents become familiar with the various computer software programs available today.

"We have received a number of requests from new residents for help with computer software," said Mayor Smith. "Our goal is to provide them with the knowledge and tools they need to become comfortable with using a variety of software programs."
Beckville history book to be published

Beckville Independent School District officials announced Tuesday that a book about the history of the city will be published.

The book, which is expected to be published in the fall, will focus on the history of the city and its people. The book will be the first of its kind in the city and will provide a valuable resource for residents and visitors alike.

The book will be published by the Beckville Historical Society, which was formed in 1990 to preserve the history of the city. The society has been working on the book for several years, and it is expected to be completed in the coming months.

The book will be available for purchase at the Beckville Historical Society's website and at local bookstores. The price of the book has not yet been announced.
