Union Pacific Resources Group Inc. plans to sell its gas-producing prop-est in East Texas as part of its effort to scale back 20% of its oil and gas-fields by the end of the year.

The sale, if completed, will allow the company to focus more on its re-erneable-energy projects.

The East Texas gas field is located in Panola County, which includes the Gladewater field and numerous other gas fields in the area. The sale would help the company shift its focus to more sustainable energy sources.

City seeks HOMES grant

Lower income households would benefit from a HOMES (Housing Opportunities for Modest Earnings) grant program.

On Monday, October 24, the Carthage City Council initiated a HOMES grant application for eight units. The purpose of the application is to provide affordable housing for lower income households.

According to the city, the grant will help to develop new units or rehabilitate existing ones, and the funds will be used to purchase land, cover construction costs, and other related expenses.

The city seeks proposals from developers or builders who are interested in participating in the program. Interested parties are encouraged to submit their proposals by the deadline.

The city council is hoping to complete the development of the HOMES grant program as soon as possible.
County applauds safe year

By Jerry Emminger

Pandemic-impacted 2020 was a strong jobs year for the city of Carthage, N.C., according to County Manager James Davis.

Davis said the city’s unemployment rate was below 4% in 2020, one of the lowest in the state. He attributed the strong job market to local business growth and the city’s focus on economic development.

"We’ve been working on a lot of different things to make sure that we’re staying competitive and attracting new businesses," Davis said. "It’s been a great year for Carthage and the economy has been doing well for the city."

Clinton administration, EPA offer different opinions of farm chemical regulation

Texas' largest farm organization is opposing continued enforcement of the Clean Air Act, by the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) of the U.S. Department of Environmental Protection. EPA officials say they are not sure where to draw the line for the chemical industry.

"We have to look at the impact of the new Clean Air Act," said one EPA official. "We can't just go back to the old ways of doing business."

The Act requires the EPA to review and update its regulations on the use of chemicals in agriculture. The EPA has proposed a new rule that would limit the use of certain chemicals in agriculture.

The Texas Farm Bureau, which represents the state's farmers, said it supports the EPA's efforts to protect the environment. But the Farm Bureau also said it believes the EPA is not doing enough to protect the rights of farmers.

"We support the EPA's efforts to protect the environment," said Farm Bureau President John Smith. "But we also support the rights of farmers to use the chemicals they need to grow their crops."
