SALT costly

The basic idea of the SALT-I arms control treaty is to freeze current levels of nuclear arsenals and to limit growth by not more than 20 percent over an eight year period. The treaty is expected to limit the size of the American and Soviet nuclear arsenals at about 6,000 warheads each, or a total of 12,000 warheads.

The SALT-II treaty proposed freezing the current levels of nuclear arsenals for an additional eight years and limiting growth by not more than 20 percent over that period. The treaty is expected to limit the size of the American and Soviet nuclear arsenals at about 6,000 warheads each, or a total of 12,000 warheads.

The SALT-I treaty was signed in 1979 and entered into force in 1982. The SALT-II treaty was signed in 1982 but was never ratified by the Senate and thus never entered into force.

Extra pounds appear during night

There may be a juggling of calories and a lack of sleep, but if the weight is going on during the night, the cause is easy to find. A heavy meals, lack of sleep, and a lack of physical activity are all factors that can lead to weight gain during the night.

Between The Lines
by Jim Swearingen

The recent court decision in the case of Smith v. Allstate Insurance Company has made it clear that the insurance company is not liable for the loss of a policyholder's policy.

The court ruled that the insurance company is not liable for the loss of a policyholder's policy, even if the company is negligent in its handling of the policy. The court noted that the insurance company is not required to keep a record of the policyholder's policies, and that the company is not required to keep a record of the policyholder's personal information.

The court also ruled that the insurance company is not liable for the loss of a policyholder's policy, even if the company is negligent in its handling of the policy. The court noted that the insurance company is not required to keep a record of the policyholder's policies, and that the company is not required to keep a record of the policyholder's personal information.
