Grocers angered by HUDCO exclusion

Grosers were angered by HUDCO exclusion from the program.

"The local industry," however, stated that as long as HUDCO is excluded from the program, "we don't have any choice but to continue," they said.

The HUDCO exclusion has been a major point of contention among the local industry. The group has been working to get HUDCO included in the program, and they have been met with resistance from local administrators.

The "local industry" stated that they have been forced to take action against HUDCO's exclusion.

Heat prostration can kill cattle

In Brown County, 17 cattle have been killed and 15 have died from excessive heat. Dr. Donald Stieh, owner of Agriculture Clinic, advises farmers to be alert to the dangers of heat prostration. According to Dr. Stieh, cattle are particularly susceptible to heat prostration as they have a large surface area to volume ratio, which increases their heat stress. Farmers should monitor their cattle's behavior for signs of heat prostration, such as excessive drinking, reduced feed intake, or listlessness. If heat prostration is suspected, farmers should provide shade, increase water availability, and limit direct sunlight exposure to their cattle. Dr. Stieh also recommends using fans or mist systems to cool the cattle. Brown County remains under a heat advisory, and farmers are encouraged to take precautions to protect their livestock.
