Blackmail didn't work

BY ANTHONY BARRELL

In this age of the art collector, the blackmailer is not a thing of the past. A recent case in New York City illustrates this fact.

A man was arrested for attempting to extort money from a prominent art dealer. The blackmailer claimed to have a photograph of the dealer's wife in a compromising position. The deal erder was willing to pay a substantial amount of money to have the photo destroyed.

But the blackmailer demanded even more than the victim was willing to pay. The case was eventually settled out of court.

Editorials

Reagan action applauded

We applaud President Reagan's decision to restore friendly relations with the Soviet Union.

The policy of détente, initiated by President Ford, was characterized by a mutualization of national security interests. It involved the United States and the Soviet Union in a process of mutual trust and cooperation.

In the wake of the Iran-Contra scandal, Reagan's new policy opens the way for a new era of Sino-American relations. We welcome this move, and hope it will lead to a peaceful resolution of the conflict in the Middle East.

The blackmailer is a dangerous character who can cause a great deal of trouble. It is important to be aware of his presence and to take action to prevent him from carrying out his schemes.

The Baptist church is expanding its influence in the United States, and we applaud its efforts to reach out to people of all backgrounds.

The Lutheran church is being formed, which is a significant development. We hope it will bring together people of different faiths.

The nursing home is setting up revival services, which is a welcome move. We hope it will bring comfort to the elderly.

Second special session of Texas Legislature may be avoided

STATE CAPITAL HIGHLIGHTS

By Leland Wilson

For the past five years, the Texas legislature has been operating as a regular session, which means that it has been able to handle the state's business without the need for a special session. However, the current session is scheduled to end on June 1, and there are concerns that the legislature may need to extend its term to address some of the issues that have arisen during the session.

The legislature has been dealing with a number of important issues, including education, healthcare, and budgeting. Many lawmakers have expressed concern that the legislature may not have enough time to address all of these issues before the end of the session.

“While we have made progress on many of these issues, there are still a number of important matters that need to be addressed,” said one lawmaker. “We need to give ourselves enough time to do a thorough job and ensure that we are making the best possible decisions for the people of Texas.”

The governor of Texas has also expressed concern about the possibility of a special session. “We don’t want to see the legislature extend its term unnecessarily,” said the governor. “We need to make sure that we are making the best possible decisions and that we are fulfilling our responsibilities to the people of Texas.”

It remains to be seen whether the legislature will need to extend its term or if it will be able to complete its work in time to avoid a special session. The governor has expressed a willingness to work with the legislature to ensure that the state’s business is handled in a timely and effective manner.
