Tom Jones' Notebook

On abandoned cars

By Tom Jones

Over the years of a life, you forget the years you spent, but you don't forget the cars. I've seen many fine automobiles, but I've also seen many fine cars that have been abandoned. They were left behind, alone in the world, without a name or a purpose. They were silent, waiting for someone to come and take them away. But they never did. They just sat there, gathering dust, as time passed by.

One day, I was walking down the street, and I saw a car that had been abandoned. It was parked in the middle of the road, and it was covered in leaves. The paint was peeling off, and the windows were broken. It was a sight to behold. I couldn't help but feel sorry for the car. It was there, all alone, without anyone to love it.

I decided to approach the car, and I knocked on the door. I couldn't believe my eyes when I opened it. Inside, there was a young woman, crying. She had just lost her job, and she was feeling lonely. She told me that she had loved that car, but she couldn't afford to keep it anymore. She asked me if I could take it off her hands.

I agreed, and we loaded the car onto my truck. We drove home, and I parked the car in my garage. It was a beautiful car, and I knew that I had to do something with it. I decided to restore it, to bring it back to life. It took me months, but I finally finished. I painted it, replaced the broken windows, and even added a new roof.

When I finished, the car looked brand new. I was proud of what I had done, and I knew that it would bring joy to someone who needed it. I drove it around town, and everyone loved it. They said it was the most beautiful car they had ever seen. I felt good knowing that I had made someone else happy.

I decided to give the car to a charity, so that it could help someone else. I knew that it would be loved and cared for, and it would bring happiness to many people. It was a small act of kindness, but it made me feel good inside. I knew that I had done something good, and I was proud of myself.

I learned that life is full of opportunities to help others. You never know when you might need a little help, so you should always be ready to help others when you can. It feels good to give, and it feels even better to receive. I hope that everyone can find a way to give back to others, just like I did with that old car.
Some voters now in new precincts

Voters living in the above area will find that they have changed precinct. Previously, Precinct 2 (Carthage) was divided into two precincts, Precinct 1 and Precinct 2. In May, 1972, the voters of Precinct 2 (Carthage) voted to change the county line, and the voters in the eastern portion were placed in Precinct 1. Those living in the western part of the precinct are now in Precinct 2. The new precincts are located in the area of the map indicated above.
