You've got to keep on...

One step won't take you very far,
You've got to keep walking.

One word won't tell them who you are,
You've got to keep talking.

An inch won't make you very tall,
You've got to keep on growing.

A constant drop of water,
Wears away the hardest stone.

By constant gnawing, Bowser
Masticates the toughest bone.

The constant cooing lover
Carries off the blushing maid.

And the constant advertiser
Is the one who gets the trade.

Marshall's World

Biscuits meant more dresses

I still have family friends who wonder why I rode those horses as I did when I was growing up.

What we rode were grey geldings and although it was not much fun in some respects, it made for some great stories.

That is why I insist on taking the kids on a horse ride at least once a year. It is a unique way to bond with them and create lasting memories.

It seems that when we first got the horses, they were still quite young. We would often start with a little bit of training and then move on to more advanced techniques.

Now, they are old and we have decided to sell them. It is a hard decision, but it is time to let them find their new homes.

We used to spend hours together on those horses, and it was always a lot of fun. I will always remember the time we went on a long trail ride and got lost in the woods.

We had to rely on our own skills and work together to find our way back. It was an adventure that we will never forget.

Marshall, a man from the town, used to make those biscuits that were so popular.

Mama used to make them for us every Saturday morning, and they were always special. She would carefully roll out the dough and place the berries inside before baking them.

Now, I can still remember the taste of those biscuits. They were so sweet and delicious.

Marshall's world was full of interesting characters, and he always had a way with words. His stories were always entertaining, and we would often find ourselves laughing out loud.

His back trouble was a big issue, and he tried various treatments to ease his pain. But nothing seemed to work.

The local doctor recommended surgery, but Marshall refused to undergo it. He believed that a carefully chosen diet and regular exercise could help him.

Nevertheless, his back continued to ache, and he became more and more restricted in his movement. It was a difficult time for everyone who knew him.

After Marshall passed away, we were left with many sad memories. But we also knew that he had lived a full and fulfilling life, and that was something to be grateful for.

Marshall was always a man of integrity and honesty, and he lived by his principles. His legacy will live on through the stories we tell and the memories we cherish.

So, let us remember Marshall's world and the lessons he taught us. Let us honor his memory and continue to enjoy the simple pleasures of life.

Things you should know about snakes

By Frank M. Amsden

Snakes are fascinating creatures, and it's important to know how to handle them properly. Here are some tips on how to deal with snakes:

1. Keep your distance: Snakes are wild animals, and they should be kept at a safe distance.
2. Don't approach: If you encounter a snake, don't approach it. Let it go.
3. Keep your hands away: Snakes can strike without warning, so keep your hands away from them.
4. Stay calm: If you encounter a snake, stay calm and don't panic.

First Things First
A DEVOTIONAL

My Warmest and Most Sincere Thanks.

To the voters of this school district that took the time and effort to write my name on their ballot in Tuesday’s election. As you know there was a record turnout of voters and I think we must have set some sort of record for write-ins in a school trustee election. Once again, my heartiest thanks for the confidence you have shown toward me.

Fire destroys large Carthage home

By TOM FISHER

Although a cause hasn't been determined, fire and water damaged a large home in the 300 block of West Mulberry Street in Carthage, according to Carthage Fire Chief J.W. Norwood.

The fire started in the attic. It damaged the attic, the roof, and the siding on the entire house. The roof had to be replaced, and a section of siding had to be replaced. The house is insured, so the owner, D. P. Ellis, does not have to worry about the cost of the repairs.

The fire was contained to the house and did not spread to any other structures.
