There are certain things in the national news the past week that have troubled me, and I'm not fully sure why. It's probably because I'm still concerned about the Vietnam War. We've been at aitch and the other around for so long.

We've been at it for so long, years of war, of destruction, of death, of injury. We've been at it for so long, and yet we haven't learned anything.

A look at 1982 - Halfway through

The Sideline:

By Kyle Harpsey
Watchman Sports Editor

I was looking back early Thursday morning at some of the papers that I have reviewed for the year. At each newspaper I’ve worked at these have been various stories that I have written for the city, but no nothing else, just to kill time on an empty page.

And there are many stories that are out there in society, society that I’m sure you can write about more than twice as much in the last week of December or the first week in January each year.

The story is usually accompanied with a couple of photos and, once through about three paragraphs, you’re done.

Well there are some things about that you can write about forever. Like this year Carthage was the home of two basketball teams with a chance to win it all.

Well there are some things about that you can write about forever. Like this year Carthage was the home of two basketball teams with a chance to win it all.

When I came to Carthage from Houston, I thought there was no way they could be the way that they were.

But, thanks to the many athletes in Carthage, especially within the school systems here, there have been plenty of surprises.

There have been exciting results from Carthage High School in basketball, football, and baseball.

Here in the city, there is a story in the last month or so of basketball that has been exciting and surprising.

Avery Jones, one of the players for the Carthage High School football team, was named to the all state team.
