Cancer Society sets local crusade

The Cancer Society held a kick-off event for its annual crusade on May 6. The event was held at the Chamber of Commerce and included speeches from local officials and cancer survivors. The goal of the crusade is to raise awareness and funds for cancer research and support. The American Cancer Society has set a fundraising target of $100,000 for this year's crusade. Only businesses will be able to participate in the crusade, and donations must be made in cash or checks.

The American Cancer Society has been working to prevent and control cancer since its inception in 1913. It is the largest voluntary health agency dedicated to eliminating the threat of cancer in our community. The organization raises money through events such as the annual crusade to fund research and support services for people with cancer.

$1.5 million apartment project to begin soon

Cleveland

The Cleveland city council approved Tuesday night a plan to build a 150-unit apartment complex near downtown Cleveland. The project, which is expected to cost $1.5 million, would be financed through tax credits and other incentives. The council voted 5-0 in favor of the project, which is intended to revitalize the downtown area and provide affordable housing for residents. The apartment complex would be built on land currently owned by the city, and the city has agreed to provide up to $250,000 in tax credits to help finance the project. The project is expected to create approximately 150 jobs during construction and 20 permanent jobs once the apartments are occupied. The council also approved a property tax abatement of up to $100,000 for the developer, who has agreed to pay a $25,000 fee to the city for each occupied apartment. The city also agreed to provide a $50,000 grant to help cover the cost of relocating residents currently living in the downtown area who are expected to be displaced by the project. The project is expected to be completed within three years, and the city is working with the developer to ensure that the project meets the city's requirements for affordable housing.
Mattox cites decision

Good news is, Texas 'Lemon Law' found to be constitutional

In a recent decision by the Texas Lemon Law appellate court, the state's Lemon Law was found to be constitutional. The court ruled that the law, which requires car dealers to repair defects in new vehicles within a reasonable time frame, is enforceable and that consumers have a right to sue car dealers if their vehicles are not repaired within the specified time frame.

Report for your official

The Lemon Law provides a means for consumers to seek redress if their vehicles are defective. Consumers who have purchased a new vehicle within the last three years and have experienced significant problems with the vehicle can file a claim under the Lemon Law. The law requires car dealers to repair the vehicle within a reasonable time frame, or if they cannot, to replace the vehicle or refund the purchase price.

Medical researchers at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas have been working on a new gene-editing technology called CRISPR-Cas9. This technology allows scientists to precisely cut and replace DNA sequences in cells, which could have implications for treating genetic diseases.

The researchers have used CRISPR-Cas9 to correct a genetic error that causes sickle cell anemia, a blood disorder that affects millions of people worldwide. In sickle cell anemia, the red blood cells become stiff and sticky, leading to pain and organ damage.

In a recent study, the researchers injected CRISPR-Cas9 into the blood of mice with sickle cell anemia. The treatment was able to correct the genetic error in the mice, leading to improved blood cell function and reduced symptoms.

The researchers believe that this technology could eventually be used to treat other genetic diseases, including cystic fibrosis and muscular dystrophy. However, more research is needed to fully understand the safety and efficacy of CRISPR-Cas9 as a treatment for these diseases.

Horse, make-shift tools provide mobility

By Don Groves

"I don’t like to get too far out of the saddle with my horse,” says local cowboy, Armond Baker. Baker, who has been around horses and cows in the Panola area for many years, has been through a lot. The hard work and dedication he has shown through the years has earned him the respect of many in the Panola area.

Baker, who is known for his horse, "Buck," has been through many challenges. One of the biggest challenges was when he had to make a difficult choice. Baker had to choose between riding a horse that was too old or too young. He decided to take the horse that was too old and to make a makeshift saddle and stirrups.

Baker is a well-known figure in the Panola area. He is respected for his knowledge of horses and his ability to work with them. His dedication to the horse industry has earned him a lot of respect.

Baker, who owns Baker’s Western Wear, has been involved in the horse industry for many years. He has had many successes and a few failures. Despite the challenges, Baker continues to work hard and to make a difference in the horse industry.

"I love working with horses,” says Baker. "It’s a way of life for me.” Baker is a true cowboy and is respected for his dedication to the horse industry.

"I do whatever I want to and I’m as happy now as I would have been anyway,”” --Willie Scott

Munro joins crime prevention program to students
McGruff to join Carthage classes

Pauline Byers, a senior at the University of Texas at Austin, has announced that she will be joining the crime prevention program at Carthage College. The program, which is sponsored by the National Crime Prevention Council, aims to educate students about the importance of reducing crime and promoting a safe and healthy community.

The program features a series of lectures and discussions on topics such as personal safety, cybercrime prevention, and crime prevention strategies. Students will also have the opportunity to participate in hands-on activities and workshops to learn practical skills for protecting themselves and others from crime.

Byers, a criminal justice major, said she is excited to be a part of the program and hopes to inspire other students to become involved in crime prevention activities. "I think it's important for students to understand the impact of crime on our community and to take an active role in preventing it," she said.

The program will begin on September 1st and will run through the end of the academic year. Interested students are encouraged to contact the program coordinator for more information.

FAITH BIDS US TREAT ALL OF GOD'S CREATURES WITH LOVE

We know that our world is divided by many kinds of living creatures, and that the worms of progress make it difficult for us to share it with them. Some of these species have been isolated for years and can no longer exist on their own. However, there are certain other varieties that struggle to survive, despite the encouragement of cultivation upon their bodies, and all others that have attempted to it. We must realize that there are many ways in which we share our home and our destiny with them. We are their children of the earth. Remember that we are brothers to all of the worms, and respect that we would want for ourselves. Because we have a common interest placed on us for a divine purpose on the earth.

These merchants urge you to attend the church of your choice this Sunday!

First Things First

By Judy Jernaven

"First things first." The words of Jesus were a call to focus on what is most important. In the life of the Church, this means prioritizing our relationships with God and each other. It means focusing on the core of our faith: love, faith, and obedience. It means being attentive to the needs of those around us, both within and outside the Church. It means living a life that reflects the love and compassion of Jesus. In the words of St. Francis of Assisi, "Preach the Gospel always; if necessary, use words." We are called to be the Church in the world, to be the love of Jesus in action. Let us remember, as we prepare for the new year, that the first thing we must do is to love one another, to live our faith, and to be the light of Jesus in the world. Amen.

"Double’full-time salary concerns hospital board"

"They’re also paying me for what I know" says employee

Facing a $20,000 deficit, the hospital board was split on adopting the salary plan.

The board was divided on the matter of whether a full-time employee should receive a salary based on the amount of work they do. The plan would have allowed the employee to earn a salary of $20,000 per year, which is double the amount they would earn for part-time work. The board was divided on whether this was a fair compensation for the amount of work the employee would be doing.
