Local industry could face shutdown if government standards are not met

EPA raises stink over Carthage sewerage

By Bill Ochs
The Carthage City Council is currently under a mop-up with EPA authorities, having possible intention to shut down the sewerage. The city's waste disposal system is supposed to be in compliance with federal and state standards, but a recent inspection by the EPA revealed some issues that need to be addressed.

The council meeting was held Wednesday in the city council chambers on North Main Street. The meeting was attended by a large number of residents and city officials, including the mayor and city manager. The EPA official in charge of the inspection, Mr. Smith, was present and discussed the issues found during the inspection.

Regarding the EPA's findings, Mr. Smith stated that the city's waste disposal system is not in compliance with federal and state standards. He further added that the city has 30 days to address the issues and bring the system into compliance.

The city council has already taken steps to address the issues found during the inspection. They have already worked with engineers to develop a plan to address the issues and bring the system into compliance.

TastyBird officials hopeful new process will remedy high waste level problems

By Bill Ochs

The TastyBird officials in Carthage are hopeful that a new process being tested by the company will remedy the high waste level problems. The company has been facing waste level issues for the past few weeks, leading to a temporary shutdown of the facility.

The company has been working with a local waste management company to develop a new process that would help reduce the waste level. The new process, which involves the use of a new technology, has been tested and found to be effective.

The company is hopeful that the new process will help reduce the waste level and allow them to continue operations without any further interruptions.
EPA says ‘correct sewer overload or face serious action’

Theresa Miller and Lisa Serns, spokespeople for the Muskogee Regional Water Project, said that the project remains on track for completion by the end of this year. The project is expected to provide a new solid waste disposal system for the city, which has been in need of an upgrade for some time. The project is expected to cost around $40 million and is being funded through a combination of federal and state grants.

Theresa Miller and Lisa Serns said that they believe it is important to keep the project moving forward in order to meet the needs of the community. They noted that the project has been underway for several years and that having it completed by the end of the year would be a significant milestone.

Theresa Miller and Lisa Serns also said that they believe it is important to keep the public informed about the progress of the project. They noted that the project has been the subject of some controversy in the past and that keeping the public informed is important in order to build support for the project.

Plant will do ‘what is necessary’

Sabine River Authority could help problem

As an affiliate of the Sabine River Authority, the Sabine River Authority Regional Water System is working to address issues with the Sabine River flood control system. The river system has been experiencing problems in recent years, including flooding and water quality issues.

The Sabine River Authority Regional Water System is working to address these issues by improving the infrastructure of the system and implementing new technologies. The system is also working to increase public awareness of the importance of the river system and the need for continued funding to support its operations.

Oil, gas wells developed in county

Poinsett County's new oil and gas development office at the No. 15. Those are the words of Poinsett County's C. A. A. S. E. U. (Committee on the Environment) that is working on a program to develop oil and gas wells in the county. The development office is located at the same street as the Poinsett County Library, north of the courthouse.

It is a step in the right direction for the county, according to Robert Gunther, director of the Poinsett County Library. He says it will help local businesses and residents who are interested in learning more about the development.

"This is a great step forward for our economy," Gunther said. "It will create jobs and help our local businesses grow."

Newsmen ordained locally

By Dr. Jerry Barnett

Two local men have been ordained as ministers of the Gospel. Alan Smith and John Doe have been serving as associate ministers for the past year. The ordination service was a somber and solemn occasion, with many members of the congregation present to show their support.

Strength For Living

By Rev. Jerry Barnett

The importance of strength in the lives of Christians cannot be overstated. We need strength to face the challenges of life, to stand firm in our faith, and to share the Gospel with others. Strength can be found in the daily practices of prayer, study, and devotion. These practices help us to grow in our faith and to live a life that is pleasing to God. It is important to remember that strength comes from within, and that we must cultivate it through our daily lives.

Senator explains legislative action

Mayor Gino Cordero, in an interview with the Press, expressed his strong support for the proposed legislation. The bill would reduce the current property tax rate by increasing the tax cap from 4% to 5%. Cordero stated that this would provide much-needed relief to homeowners and businesses. The mayor also highlighted the importance of education funding, and expressed his hope that the legislature would prioritize this area in future budgets.

A landmark civil rights victory

In a historic decision, the Supreme Court ruled in favor of the plaintiffs in the case of Smith v. Jones. The court's decision overturned a previous ruling that had been in effect for nearly 40 years. The new ruling will have a significant impact on the rights of individuals with disabilities, as it requires public accommodation facilities to make reasonable accommodations to ensure accessibility.

Shady Grove News

By John B. Calloway

Hello, I am John B. Calloway, and I wanted to share some exciting news with you. Our school has been accepted into the prestigious Shady Grove Academy, a renowned boarding school in the heart of the city. This is a great opportunity for our students to receive a world-class education and develop essential life skills.

The application process was rigorous, but the hard work and dedication of our students paid off. I am thrilled to see them excel and reach new heights academically and personally. I look forward to seeing the next generation of leaders emerge from Shady Grove Academy.

City approves ‘floating holiday’

At its last meeting, the City Council approved a new policy allowing employees to request additional days off on a floating holiday. The policy provides flexibility and encourages employees to take time off for personal reasons, such as family events or religious holidays.

The policy applies to regular full-time employees and is designed to enhance job satisfaction and work-life balance. It also aims to reduce absenteeism and improve overall employee retention.

Floating holiday policy

The city will establish a floating holiday for each employee who works 30 hours or more per week. Employees can request the day off up to 30 days in advance. The policy will be implemented for the upcoming fiscal year.

The city’s human resources department will monitor the policy’s impact and make adjustments as necessary to ensure its effectiveness.

The city of Austin is considering providing equal employment opportunities for transgender individuals in its workforce. The city is currently revising its anti-discrimination policies to include gender identity and expression as protected classes.

The proposed policy would prohibit discrimination based on gender identity and expression in all aspects of city employment, including hiring, promotion, and pay. The policy is expected to be adopted in the upcoming months.

The city’s Human Resources Department will host an informational meeting for city employees on October 15th to discuss the proposed policy and answer any questions they may have.

The city is committed to creating a diverse and inclusive workplace where all employees are treated with respect and dignity.
