CISD to set bond election

Former Vatican Bank head Luigi Mancini has been arrested for his role in a money-laundering scheme that worked through the Vatican's own bank, the Holy See, in the early 1990s, according to Italian police.

The 79-year-old Mancini, who served as the bank's chairman from 1986 to 1995, is accused of fraud and money laundering over a decade-long period, according to a statement by the Italian police. Mancini, who is currently living in the United States, was arrested in New York and is expected to be extradited to Italy soon.

Mancini was one of the most senior officials of the Vatican Bank, which was established in 1947 to regulate financial transactions related to the Vatican. The bank was known for its secrecy and was considered a haven for high-level criminals and money launderers.

According to Italian police, Mancini and his accomplices used the bank to launder billions of dollars through a network of offshore accounts. The money was transferred to various accounts in the bank, which were then used to purchase real estate in the United States and Europe.

The Italian police said that the money laundering scheme was one of the largest in history and involved the use of various techniques, including false invoices and shell companies.

Mancini's arrest comes after a series of investigations by Italian authorities, who have been probing the bank since 2015. The investigations have focused on alleged money laundering and tax evasion.

The Italian police have also arrested several other high-level officials of the Vatican Bank, including former chief executive officer Pietro Perotto and former chief financial officer Marco Sudici.

The arrests come as the Vatican faces increasing pressure to reveal its financial practices, which have been the subject of criticism from the international community.

The Vatican has been under pressure to open its own finances to scrutiny for years, but theHoly See's response has been slow and incomplete. In 2018, the Vatican signed an agreement with the Italian government to provide access to its financial records, but the agreement has not been implemented.

Mancini's arrest is expected to further strain relations between the Vatican and the Italian government, which has been trying to increase transparency in the Holy See's finances.

The Vatican has said that it is cooperating with the Italian authorities and that it is committed to improving its financial practices. However, the Vatican has also said that it is preventing the forwarding of the arrest warrants to Italy due to concerns over the safety of the accused. A similar case occurred in 2017 when the Vatican prevented the extradition of former Vatican Finance Council president Paul Nouel.

If the extradition is successful, Mancini could face up to 20 years in prison.

The Vatican Bank's operations have been controversial since its establishment, and it has been subjected to financial scandals and allegations of corruption in the past. In 2017, the bank was forced to cancel a $181 million deal with the law firm of Domenico Del Duca because of concerns over the bank's financial practices.

The bank has also been under scrutiny for its handling of the Holy See's €35 million ($39 million) debt to the Italian government in 2012. The Vatican has said that it is working to resolve the issue, but it has yet to reach a settlement.
Summer heat causes county problems

By Andrew Evans

Although a brief heat wave hit last week, it was short and quickly ended. The weekend weather was very pleasant, with highs in the low 80s and lows in the upper 60s. The heat is expected to return later this week, with highs in the mid-90s and lows in the low 80s.

County crime rate down

By Susan C. Wilson

Chief Deputy Tom said that county crime rates have been declining over the past year. He noted that the number of crimes reported in the county has dropped by 20% since last year. The police department has increased its patrols and has been more proactive in preventing crimes.

More one liners needed

By Alonzo Ayers

Here are a few of my favorite one liners that I have come across:

1. A man was walking down the street when he saw a sign that said, "One man went in and came out a hero." He thought that was very interesting, so he went inside and found out that the sign was for a show called "One Man Show." He then proceeded to watch the show and was surprised to find out that the hero was a ukelele player.

2. A man was walking down the street when he saw a sign that said, "Two men went in and came out a hero." He thought that was very interesting, so he went inside and found out that the sign was for a show called "Two Man Show." He then proceeded to watch the show and was surprised to find out that the hero was a drag queen.

3. A man was walking down the street when he saw a sign that said, "Three men went in and came out a hero." He thought that was very interesting, so he went inside and found out that the sign was for a show called "Three Man Show." He then proceeded to watch the show and was surprised to find out that the hero was a group of ventriloquist dummies.

These are just a few of my favorite one liners. I hope you enjoyed them as much as I did.

Food stores to participate in festival

The American Heart Association wants you to walk the talk about heart health. From Sept. 14-20, more than 200 supermarkets in Texas will participate in American Heart Association’s “Shop and Walk” event. The event is part of the Food Festival, hosted in collaboration with the American Heart Association, in support of heart and stroke prevention.

Supermarket managers will encourage their customers to walk and shop at the same time. This will include food demonstrations, cooking classes, and tips on choosing nutritious foods. Participants will receive a complimentary healthy recipe book and have the chance to win prizes, including a year’s supply of fruits and vegetables.

The event is part of a broader effort to promote heart health and reduce the risk of heart disease and stroke. The American Heart Association encourages everyone to make heart-healthy choices in their daily lives, such as eating a balanced diet, getting regular exercise, and managing stress.
