the grants. The city, which the 1974 and 1976 season figures are based on, applied for Federal and state aid in the amount of $200,000. The city did not receive any of the funds because the money was committed to other uses.

Joseph S. Thomas, president of the United Firemen's Benevolent Association, said that his group would continue to oppose the grant system if the city council decides to use it again.

Thomas said that the grant system has been in operation for 15 years and that the city council has always used it to provide funds for the fire department.

The council has been criticized for using the grant system because it provides funds for other purposes as well.

PERSPECTIVES

Bentsen introduces bill setting trade limits

In his recent Senate Armed Services Subcommittee on Foreign Relations hearing on the steel trade bill, Al Bentsen, a Democrat from Texas, introduced a bill that would set a $20 billion trade deficit for the United States. The bill would limit the imports of goods from countries that have a trade surplus with the United States.

The bill is designed to protect American workers who have been hurt by imported goods. It would impose tariffs on goods from countries that have a trade surplus with the United States, such as China and Japan. The tariffs would be used to force these countries to reduce their trade surpluses with the United States, thereby reducing the trade deficit.

The bill has received support from both Republicans and Democrats. Many members of both parties believe that the trade deficit is a major problem for the United States and that something must be done to address it.

Who's that lady waving on Highway 149?

You're driving down Highway 149 toward Beasley on a beautiful Sunday afternoon when something suddenly catches your eye. You slow down, stop your car, roll down the window, and watch intently as a lady waves from the side of the road. She's standing there for at least 10 minutes, holding a flagpole in one hand and a small American flag in the other.

She seems to be waving at everyone who drives by, but nobody seems to notice. The lady is wearing a red shirt and a white hat, and she has a big smile on her face.

You're wondering what her story is. Maybe she's trying to raise money for a good cause, or maybe she's just having fun. Either way, you decide to stop and ask her why she's waving.

"I'm just trying to make people happy," she says. "I figure that a little wave can brighten someone's day, and who knows, maybe it'll even change the world."

You're impressed by her optimism, and you continue on your way, feeling a little more cheerful. You can't help but wonder what other good things might happen because of that wave.

Cafeteria quandary caused by too many

Of all the trouble-plagued school districts in the state, the cafeteria quandary at the Panhandle School District is perhaps the most perplexing. The problem began about two months ago when the district received a bill from the supplier for $10,000 worth of food that had been delivered but not paid for. The district had initially agreed to pay for the food, but then discovered that the supplier had not provided any documentation to prove that the food had been delivered. The district refused to pay the bill, leading to a dispute with the supplier. The situation has since escalated as the district has received additional bills for food that has not been delivered, totaling over $20,000. The district is now trying to resolve the situation by working with the supplier to verify the delivery of the food and establish a payment plan. The district is also considering ways to improve its purchasing process to avoid similar issues in the future.

The Rotary Club encourages students to apply for the scholarships and to seek guidance from their guidance counselors for assistance in the application process.

1861 jail: Entwined in history

By Sarah Smith

There are no ghosts on the old Panola County jail, but they may be looking over the shoulder of the man who is standing in front of the statue of a man with a gun. The statue is a replica of the gun that was used to shoot the man who was hanged in the jail. The statue is made of metal and is painted black. It is about 6 feet tall and has a long, thin body. The man is standing on a small pedestal and is holding the gun with both hands. The gun is pointed at the statue of the man with the gun.

In the background, there is a large building with many windows. The building is made of brick and has a large, blue sign with white letters that says "Panola County Jail." The sign is attached to the side of the building.

The building is surrounded by trees and there is a small pond in front of it. The pond is filled with water and has a few ducks swimming in it.

Felonies offenses in limbo

County officials are seeking to have a court convicted of the crimes in Panola County after the investigation last week. District Attorney Mike Peterson has been charged with first-degree murder in the death of J.J. Johnson.

Johnson, who was killed in 1960, was found with a bullet wound to the head. Peterson was convicted of second-degree murder in the case.

The latest development in the case comes after Peterson was granted a new trial. Peterson was found guilty of murder in the first degree.

The new trial was granted after Peterson's attorney filed a motion for a new trial, citing "inadequate representation" by Peterson's former attorneys.

The new trial will begin next month.

Voters to decide fate of 15 amendments

Texas voters will decide the fate of 15 amendments to the Texas Constitution on the ballot. The amendments are designed to improve the state's government and provide more flexibility in the state's finances.

The amendments include changes to the state's tax system, a new budgeting system, and a new system for electing state officials.

Voters will also decide whether to switch to a single-member district system for state legislative elections.

The amendments were approved by the state legislature and sent to the voters for approval.

Do you know your boss?

If you're going to have to go through the motions of working for someone, you might as well know who you're working for. The newspaper office of Panola County and the Carter County Chamber of Commerce has compiled a list of the most popular bosses in the area.

The list is based on a survey of employees in the area. The list includes the names of the bosses and the number of employees who think they are the best bosses.
