Chuck's Country

All of us have a lot of things that we "should do". We wish we could do more of them, but we don't. We make plans and then put them aside. One of the big items on my list is to get my house in order. I would like to have a clean, well-organized house. However, I have been putting it off for too long. I know that if I don't do it soon, I will regret it later. I need to start now and get it done.

According to national statistics, there are about 1,000 households in the United States that should be part of the group. According to the United States Census Bureau, over 50% of American households have at least one person who works full-time. This means that there are over 1,000 households in the United States that should be part of the group.

The year in retrospect: 1985 noted as eventful year

Editor's note: This is the first in a series of four articles reviewing the major news events in Panola County for 1985. Female Custom's staff writers are submitting the articles on the premise that we are more than just a look at the past year.

The year in review:

Panola County was busy, bustling and eventful in 1985. From the beginning of the year until the end, events took place throughout the county, affecting residents and visitors alike. The year was marked by significant developments in various fields, including agriculture, education, and business. The following are some of the highlights from the year:

In agriculture, Panola County was noted for its excellent crop yields, with the 1985 harvest being one of the best in recent years. Despite some challenges, such as drought and pest infestations, farmers were able to produce a bountiful harvest, contributing to the local economy.

In education, the Panola County School District continued to make strides in improving student performance. The district implemented new curriculum standards and加大对教师培训，resulting in improved academic outcomes for students. Additionally, the district's efforts to attract and retain high-quality teachers were recognized, as they were able to attract several top educators to the area.

In the business sector, 1985 saw significant growth and expansion. Local businesses, such as Panola Bank and Trust, reported record profits, while new businesses were established, including a new restaurant and a small retail store on Main Street. The Panola County Chamber of Commerce reported an increase in tourism, with more visitors coming to the area for its picturesque landscapes and rich history.

In addition to these developments, the county also experienced some challenges. The economic downturn continued to affect many families, and unemployment rates remained high. However, despite these challenges, the community remained strong, with residents coming together to support one another and address these issues.

Throughout the year, the county was also noted for its cultural events. The annual Panola County Fair was held in September, attracting visitors from across the state. Additionally, several local musicians performed at the annual Music Festival, which took place in the fall.

In conclusion, 1985 was a year of growth and progress in Panola County. Despite some challenges, the community remained resilient, and the county was poised for continued growth and development in the years to come.

New test labeled "fraud"

The Panola County group voices disapproval of the new test labeled "fraud." It is the latest of several tests that have been criticized by educators, parents, and students. The test was given to students across the county, and many are unhappy with the results. The test was developed by a company that has a history of creating controversial tests. The group is calling for an end to the test and for the district to consider other options.

Tatum sales taxes grow

By Tom Tatum

Sales in Tatum have grown significantly over the past year. According to the latest numbers from the Tatum Chamber of Commerce, sales have increased by 25 percent. This is largely due to the expansion of the local hospital and the growth of new businesses in the area. The Chamber is working to attract more businesses to the area and is encouraging residents to support local businesses.

Minister has no-nonsense view

Bristow believes men should look like men

By Rev. Bill Bratlow

Mr. B. Bratlow, 84, has been a minister for 35 years and is the pastor of the Church of God Church in Nacogdoches. He recently announced that he will be retiring at the end of the year.

"We believe a person should look like their sex. If you identify as a woman, you should look like a woman. If you identify as a man, you should look like a man," he said.

"We believe men should take care of their bodies and present themselves in a manner that is consistent with their gender. Men should dress like men, cut their hair like men, and wear makeup if they choose to," he added.

The Church of God Church has a strong emphasis on traditional gender roles and values. They believe that men should be the providers and protectors of their families, and women should be the caretakers of the home.

Dr. Sharon Carpenter, a professor of gender studies at Texas A&M University, expressed her concerns about the minister's views.

"It's disheartening to see someone in a position of authority promoting such outdated and harmful ideas. These beliefs can be harmful to individuals who don't fit into these rigid gender roles," she said.

"Gender is a complex and diverse concept, and everyone should be allowed to express themselves in a way that feels authentic to them," she added.

Despite the controversy, the Church of God Church has a large following in the Nacogdoches area. Many members have expressed support for the minister's views.

However, others have spoken out against the church's policies.

"The Church of God Church is using fear and intimidation to control its members," said one church member who wished to remain anonymous.

"They're using the church as a way to suppress their own desires and beliefs," they added.

The church has denied these allegations, saying that they are simply trying to uphold traditional values.

"Our beliefs are based on the teachings of the Bible," said the church's spokesperson. "We believe that men and women have different roles in society, and we are simply trying to help people fulfill those roles."
