Alternate Operations During Campus Closure: In the event of an emergency or announced campus closure due to a natural disaster or pandemic, it may be necessary for Panola College to move to altered operations. During this time, Panola College may opt to continue delivery of instruction through methods that include, but are not limited to: online learning management system (CANVAS), online conferencing, email messaging, and/or an alternate schedule. It is the responsibility of the student to monitor Panola College's website (www.panola.edu) for instructions about continuing courses remotely, CANVAS for each class for course-specific communication, and Panola College email for important general information.

Artificial Intelligence (AI) Course Policy:

AI is a helpful tool for research; therefore, it may be used by students for research purposes. However, the goal of this course is for students to gain a particular set of skills and knowledge, as stated in the instructional goals, learning outcomes, and course content of this syllabi. Students who use AI for an easy/quick grade (regardless of the assignment type) rather than the acquisition of skill and knowledge are hindering their academic growth. Consequently, the instructor, whose expertise is the basis for assessing student development, reserves the right to change a student's grade on any work, provably or suspiciously related to AI, which is inconsistent with these goals.

In cases of disputed grades, an instructor may require students to repeat their performance on a course assignment in a controlled environment and without the use of AI to demonstrate their true acquisition of course skills and knowledge. The refusal or failure to repeat the performance shall be considered the acceptance of the originally assessed grade.

Instructional Goals and Purposes:

The purpose of this course is to serve as an introduction to the various forms of government and political ideologies that have prevailed throughout history.

Learning Outcomes: [from the ACGM catalog]

After studying all materials and resources presented in the course, the student will be able to:

1. Define and apply political terms and concepts.
2. Define political science and identify the subfields.
3. Compare and contrast different political systems and institutions.
4. Apply the methods used to study politics.
5. Critically interpret and analyze contemporary political issues and problems.

Course Content:

A general description of lecture/discussion topics included in this course are listed in the Learning Outcomes section of this syllabus.

Students in all sections of this course will learn the following content:

1. Various political concepts, including but not limited to justice, law, equality, and natural rights.

2. Various forms of government, including but not limited to democracy, tyranny, theocracy, republics, communism, and fascism.
3. Contemporary political issues, including but not limited to artificial intelligence, eugenics, environmentalism, and globalism.

Methods of Instruction/Course Format/Delivery:

This class will convey the course material through lectures, discussions, primary/secondary documents, guest speakers, instructional videos and PowerPoint presentations. Reciprocally, students are expected to take notes, listen proactively, ask questions, and read the assigned texts. Instructional methods for this course will vary depending upon the instructor and format (online, face-to-face, hybrid, etc.).

Major Assignments / Assessments:

The following items will be assigned and assessed during the semester and used to calculate the student's final grade.

Assignments

1. The assignments will cover the course material. The number and style of assignments will vary based upon the length of the semester and the individual instructor. Collectively, the assignments make up a main portion of the final grade as they ensure students are engaging the material and preparing for the exams.
2. All students will be assigned a class participation grade. This grade calculates a student's attendance and participation in graded class discussion. The means by which attendance and discussion are calculated may vary based upon the method of course delivery (i.e. face-to-face or internet class).

Assessment(s):

1. Students must successfully demonstrate their knowledge of the course learning outcomes by completing the class assignments.

Academics

1. Instructor Academic Discretion: The government department recognizes the necessity of academic freedom. As such, each instructor maintains the right to stipulate rules in addition to this syllabus concerning assignments, make-up work, grading rubrics, classroom recordings, excused absences, extra credit, and any other matters within the individual course offerings. All of the supplemental rules will be made available to the students at the start of the semester or in advance of the completion dates for individual assignments.
2. Academic Freedom: The government department recognizes the right of the instructor and the students to address controversial subjects. Academic freedom is in essence the freedom of speech in the classroom through which ideas may be challenged and truth may be pursued. Consequently, the department firmly upholds the right of instructors and students to express in writing, speech, or symbolism their understanding, opinions, and knowledge on controversial subjects. The US Supreme Court has consistently upheld that the freedom of speech "concerning public affairs is more than self-expression; it is the essence of self-government." (Garrison v. Louisiana): that "speech on public issues occupies the highest rung of the hierarchy of First Amendment values and is entitled to special protection" (Connick v. Myers): and "that Government may not prohibit the expression of an idea simply because society finds the idea itself offensive or disagreeable" (Texas v. Johnson). Therefore, academic freedom in this public, government-funded course protects the instructor and students who express opinions on public issues that some may deem offensive.

Academic freedom does not protect the libel or slander of private persons. Libel and slander consist of written and verbal defamation of a person's character through the intentional disbursement of patently false information. (New York Times v. Sullivan and Gertz v. Robert Welch). Furthermore, academic freedom does not protect against obscenity as it is possible to freely discuss controversial issues without being obscene. Obscenity follows three basic guidelines: (a) whether "the average person, applying contemporary community standards" would find that the work, taken as a whole, appeals to the prurient interest, (b) whether the work depicts or describes, in a patently offensive way, sexual conduct specifically defined by the applicable state law, and (c) whether the work, taken as a whole, lacks serious literary, artistic, political, or scientific value. (Miller v. California). In an appeal to the "community standards" of the classroom, students are required to wear modest clothing and maintain a standard of behavior consistent with the college code of conduct so as not to disrupt the learning environment. The instructor and the college reserve the right to remove students from the class, fail students and hold disciplinary actions in accordance with college policy for issues of libel, slander, and obscenity.

Finally, academic freedom and free speech are not excusatory protections for the violation of the student code of conduct, for poor performance on graded materials, or for failure to submit graded materials.

3. Academic Honesty: The central theme of education is the enlightenment of the mind. This can only be achieved by hard, honest work. Consequently, cheating and plagiarism are strictly prohibited in the course. A student must not receive from or give another student information, answers, or help during an exam. A student must not "steal" the answers from an unsuspecting student during an exam. A student must not use any sources for answers during an exam (including, but not limited to notes, books, or electronic devices) without prior authorization from the professor. A student must not obtain exam questions illegally, tamper with the exam questions, or change the results of an exam after it has been graded.

Students are prohibited from plagiarizing any assignments. Plagiarism consists of the taking of another person's ideas, words, or information and claiming those properties as one's own. Properly quoting and citing borrowed information is NOT plagiarism. However, since academic integrity is based on the originality of a student's work, no student may submit an assignment that contains an excessive amount of properly cited material. The standards and violations of academic honesty shall be further defined by the individual instructor (in accordance with college policy). Individual instructors reserve the right to employ any means of proving academic dishonesty. Students have the right to contest a plagiarism or cheating claim through the college appeals process.

4. Course participation is tantamount to successful learning. Quiz and exam grades are not always indicative of a student's actual performance in a class. Consequently, the instructor reserves the right to adjust a student's grade for better or worse based on class performance. Consistent engagement, excellent conduct, and a clear thirst for knowledge may be rewarded with a higher grade. Conversely, poor conduct, such as inappropriate behavior or derogatory language may result in a lowered grade or complete dismissal from the class. The final decision falls on the instructor's discretion.
